

Wolfowitz on the War Against Terror

The war against terror is being fought - and won - in Iraq, says Paul Wolfowitz, placing the current Iraq campaign in its strategic context. And here's David Schneider-Joseph on the same subject. They are right.

Wed, 09/03/2003 - 02:21 | permalink

I understand now.....

So we are going to make Iraq into a liberal democracy while we give billions to dictatorships like Egypt, Pakistan, Uzbekistan etc. Makes perfect sense.

by a reader on Thu, 09/04/2003 - 00:07 | reply

It Does Make Sense

Mr A. Nonymous wrote:

"So we are going to make Iraq into a liberal democracy while we give billions to dictatorships like Egypt, Pakistan, Uzbekistan etc. Makes perfect sense."

Yes, it does make perfect sense. We can only deal with one country at a time. We'll get around to telling the Egyptians, Saudis and so on that their support for terrorism is intolerable and must end but right now we need to deal with Iraq.

by Alan Forrester on Thu, 09/04/2003 - 00:59 | reply