

In A Parallel Universe – Vote For John Kerry!

InstaPundit peeks into a parallel universe and finds a John Kerry whom we would probably support for the Presidency. Whether that universe is really as close to ours as Glenn Reynolds thinks, is doubtful, unfortunately. The trouble is not only that Kerry doesn't get it, it's that the Democratic Party, and much of its constituency, have gone on a long long journey into fantasy land.

Mon, 08/23/2004 - 00:21 | digg | del.icio.us | permalink

Still not good enough

But even if all this was true, Kerry would still be the wrong man. Nothing in the parallel universe mentioned morality. Bush does...

A plan to deal with Iraq and Al Qaeda is all well and good, but what if something doesn't go according to it? We need someone who understands how to decide what to do

~curi

by a reader on Mon, 08/23/2004 - 01:39 | reply

Gol darn Kerry just doesn't know what to do; BCCI

<http://www.washingtonmonthly.com/>
read the Follow the Money story by Sirota.
Kerry and BCCI.

by a reader on Mon, 08/23/2004 - 14:48 | reply

Kerry doesn't understand morality?

> We need someone who understands how to decide what to do lol. Let's see, here's a guy fresh out of college and his country is at war. So what does he do? He volunteers for the Navy, volunteers to go to Vietnam, and volunteers for Swift Boat duty. And he does this despite misgivings. He earns a Silver Star, a Bronze Star with Combat V, and three Purple Hearts. He saves a man's life. And then, later, after seeing how crazy and fucked-up the war had become, he speaks out about it. Seems like someone's got a moral compass.

by a reader on Mon, 08/23/2004 - 22:14 | reply

errr

Why didn't he analyse if the war was Right before joining? How does earning medals mean he understands right and wrong? Are olympic athletes good at morality too?

-- Elliot Temple

<http://www.curi.us/>

by Elliot Temple on Tue, 08/24/2004 - 00:03 | reply

Kerry's moral compass

...pointed due East then, and it still does.

by a reader on Tue, 08/24/2004 - 00:48 | reply