

Good, Evil And Howard Dean

"This is a struggle of good and evil. And we're the good." (Via LGF.)

No, that was not President Bush contrasting the West with the world's terrorists and tyrants. It was Howard Dean, the new Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, contrasting the left with the right in America.

Yet you can be sure that no one will call Dean Manichaeon, or equate him with the rulers of Iran in torrents of frantic sidetracking such as this. The sophistry that equates right with wrong and then sides eagerly with wrong is ever available and ever attractive, it seems, to those who prefer the glamour of dissent to the effort of engagement with real problems.

Mon, 02/28/2005 - 00:04 | digg | del.icio.us | permalink

www.techcentralstation.com

<http://www.techcentralstation.com/022805A.html>

by a reader on Mon, 02/28/2005 - 12:01 | reply