

Randomly random stuff coz IM BORED

Submitted by boredinfrench on 2 April, 2009 - 09:35

help. i am bored and fed up and tired. in the last 2 days, i have had 5 hours sleep. my so called best friends hate me and i am generally miserable my french teacher appears to be going through a midlife crisis, and i am stuck next to sam, who keeps looking over my shoulder to see what i am writing. i should be finishing off my animations, but i left my french book at home, and can't be bothered to try and remember it. So i am writing this instead..... i am feeling weird, my boyfriend used to go out with my best friend, then SHE broke up with HIM. i now go out with him, and she's not talking to me on the account that she thinks i stole her boyfriend. ever since i started going out with him, she has been really jealous. she purposely made good friends with him again (she's hated his guts before we went out). at first, i thought, good, no problem, i'm glad they are friends, but she's just admitted that she still likes him a LOT. he's still a bit hung up on her, and according to my friend, she asked him out last night. apparantly, he's now gonna dump me for her.

my life sucks.

I don't want your post to go unanswered. It's a few weeks later but it sounds as if things were rough at the start of April.

Best wishes.

It's not a malevolent force out to get you, truly; you are in control, here. Use your mind.

all three of yall wrong. u should not hook up with a close friends ex-boyfriend. both of them will still have some kind of feelings for each other whether good or bad and whether they admit it or not. your friend is wrong for dumping him and then being accusing you, trying to steal him herself afterward, and trying to make you feel uncomfortable. The boyfriend is wrong for being with friends, and if he is dumping one for another, he is wrong for that too.

That is probably the most ridiculous thing that a friend could ever do! 1. She dumped HIM. 2. She wants HIM back, but you have him. 3. SHE asked HIM out.

Backstabber.

Much. You don't need enemies when you've got friends like that.
