

Can I Quote Me On That?

David Schneider-Joseph looked up a New York Times story cited by Michael Moore in support of one of his conspiracy theories.

Guess whom the New York Times was quoting, in that story?

Thu, 05/06/2004 - 16:26 | digg | del.icio.us | permalink

My guess is ...

... David Schneider-Joseph. But what good is a mere guess. You could tell us and give us a link, couldn't you?

by a reader on Mon, 05/10/2004 - 07:38 | reply

Link to Curiosity

a reader wrote

You could tell us and give us a link, couldn't you?

Perhaps the link we gave is not working for you. If it were, you would have seen that the person they were quoting was Michael Moore's own spokesman – in effect, Michael Moore himself.

by Editor on Mon, 05/10/2004 - 16:30 | reply

Works now ...

Well, Michael Moore isn't amusing anyway. Just very bullishly opinionated in a way which some people for some reason like. I'd hate to have such a guy on my side, so it's just as well he's a spokesperson for the other side of things most of the time.

by a reader on Tue, 05/11/2004 - 11:08 | reply