

The Difference

We are saddened and angered by the terrorist attacks that took place this morning in London. At the same time, the leaders of the G8 were meeting in Gleneagles to discuss how to try to solve some of the world's problems. The leaders at the G8 summit disagree profoundly with each another about how best to do this. However, they are good people and good people resolve their differences through discussion. Evil people, like the terrorists and the world's various fear regimes, lash out violently and hurt and kill people instead of thinking seriously about how to solve problems.

There can be no doubt that if today's terrorists had had it in their power to murder and maim and bereave ten times as many people, they would have done so with relish. If such people get hold of weapons of mass destruction they will destroy entire cities without hesitation. The West must not hesitate to take action against countries like Iran to prevent them from developing such weapons. If they do, the Iranian government and their ilk will not hold a summit when they disagree with civilised countries: they will threaten or commit mass murder to get their way.

Iran war should do just nicely

Let's give 'em hell.

Re: Iran war should do just nicely

To whom should we give hell and to what end? And what would it do nicely?

Wishing you well

I was stunned. I still am. Glad you are well, and yes, I concur with your views. Pacifism, or otherwise failing to understand the sheer hatred of these terrorists and their capacity for destruction , is a prescription for disaster.

Atheist though I am, God bless Great Britain.
